This is how our beer is made

① The grist mill

Malt is supplied in 25 kg sacks and tipped into the grist mill hopper.

② The mash pan

This is where the Hamburg brewing water is mixed with the shredded malt. This process is called mashing.

③ The lauter tun

The solid grains are separated from the liquid (wort) through the false bottom of the lauter tun. The wort flows down through the natural filter layer and is pumped back into the mash pan.

④ The wort kettle

The extracted wort is brought to boiling point and the hops are added. The standard wort concentration is adjusted through the boiling process.

⑤ The whirlpool

In the whirlpool the insoluble hops elements and proteins are separated by means of a tangential pumping process that leaves them in the middle in the shape of a solid cone.

⑥ The fermentation tank

The wort is then cooled to 12° C, during which time it is aerated and mixed with beer yeast. Now the main fermentation process comes into operation and our Block Bräu can now be called young beer. This fermentation takes around six days.

⑦ The lager tank

Our beer must then mature for four weeks at 2° C – in seven 4,000 litre tanks.

⑧ The serving tank

On entry into the serving cellar, which is kept at 2° C, the beer volume is monitored for tax purposes and pumped to each beer tap.

Ships, water and wharves

The St. Pauli Landungsbrücken are the attraction for the tourists of Hamburg, since the first steam ships started docking here in the mid-19th century. The gauge tower is the landmark of the port, which indicates the water level of the Elbe to captains shipping nearby.

Hospitality with tradition

For over a hundred years, this restaurant has been a popular meeting point for globe-trotters. Since 2012 and through our founder Eugen Block, the BLOCKBRÄU offers space for 1.000 guests and a large terrace with a fantastic view over the port of Hamburg.
